Public Safety Updates

- CA: Affluent neighborhoods across US hiring private security as cities lay off police
4.6.13 - PressTV - On the streets of Oakland, Calif., budget cuts have made the beat cop a rare breed, and some of the city's wealthy neighborhoods have turned to unarmed security guards to take their place. After people in Oakland's wealthy enclaves like Oakmore or Piedmont Pines head to work, security companies take over, cruising the quiet streets to ward off burglars looking to take advantage of unattended homes. "With less law enforcement on the streets and more home crime or perception of home crime, people are wanting something to replace that need," says Chris de Guzman, chief operating officer of First Alarm, a company that provides security to about 100 homes in Oakland... More Info
- CA: Public could make video 911 calls under new systems
4.5.13 - The Sacramento Bee - Imagine making a video call with a 911 dispatcher. That idea may soon be reality, as law enforcement agencies nationwide test technologies that will enable emergency operators to watch live video and receive text messages from the public via any communications device. Recently, 35 dispatchers from across the state huddled in a conference room at the Sacramento Police Department's Communications Center for a training course on what to expect with the next wave of 911 technology. Though the technology for video calls and text messaging already is here, law enforcement officials note that integration into the 911 emergency system still is far from certain. More Info
